ARTICLES FOR THE PARIS EXHIBITION.

It is very true that the Argentine Republic ought to be represented in the World's Fair of 1865, but people seem to think we have nothing strange in this country worthy of being sent to Europe to attract the gaze of all nations. This is most modesty: we have 100 things not seen elsewhere and which would excite intense surprise if exhibited at Paris.

1st. A Buenos Ayrean paper-dollar. Unlike the stcrlcni of the ancient Romans, its value is unknown, and would seem to resemble that common of a farrague in possessing no other intrinsic merit than its weight. As an effort of art it is however remarkable, the emblematic figures shewing an amount of "chiselling" hard to appreciate.

2nd. The Argentine stocks. Not mining or railway stocks, such being exclusively the property of foreign residents, but a sample of that kind which never fluctuates, and in which, without previous speculation, a man often gets head over ears embarrassed, and egregiously 'puts his foot in it.' These stocks are guaranteed by Government, although it is sometimes hard to calculate the interest of the investment. An Irishman, some time ago, got so heavily invested in Chascomus or Chivilcoy (we forget which) stock, after a carouse, that he was found dead next morning.

3rd. San Juan silver. This article is in great demand, and the supply wholly insufficient to meet the requirements of our market. Nevertheless as the Mining Co. (ask Mr. Dugald or Major Beard) has been organized on unparalleled success, a sample of ore and history of the enterprise if sent to Paris might drive the shares above par. We may observe that the word "beneficiar" so often repeated in the statutes, is not clearly understood by the shareholders, the actual situation of the mines is highly picturesque.

4th. The billon "Republica Argentina." As this splendid aerial conveyance, which has (cost) 200,000 $ across the S. American continent, is 27 mi lion cubic feet larger than st, Nadar's famous balloon, it would be well for our citizens to forego smoking for 24 hours, and give the price of cigars (300,000 dols mjc) to Mr. Wells that he may proceed to Paris to exhibit the monster, which will give "corrupt monarchies" an idea of the greatness and elevated notions of the Republic.

6th Argentine Manufactures. Buenos Ayres can find a match for any industrial enterprise in Europe. We happily in La Lucifer, a memorial of the pride and explosiveness of Argentines, but it will at least throw a light on the ideas of the nation. If our matches be termed Vestas, this will be a graceful compliment to the purity of our public men.

6th. A model policeman. One who has never drawn his sword to a prisoner, without first using lip homage, and subsequently taken him to the hospital. This would be termed in in England: "killing" politeness. The sword, by, it a small model of one resembling the fasces et securi of Numa's policemen, than the vulgar baton of a London peeler. Visitors are requested to give lay their hands on this or the other articles exhibited.

7th. The Army List. Prussians and Frenchmen will stare at the catalogue of Generals, and blush for their ignorance of the exploits of so many heroes on the glorious plains of Ituzaingo, Pago Largo, Arroyo de Cano, India Muerta, Frayle Vivo, &c. The most instructive part is, that whereas in Europe "promotion comes by chance of straw," here we have legions of gentlemen who exist only on the Army-roll. The reason and economy are obvious.

8th. A Gaucho Alcalde, dressed in official costume, chirips, potro boots and poncho. We verily think that if we could get a live one over to Paris he would create greater curiosity than one of the Japanese ambassadors; he might carry his lasso and balls as the emblems of his camp authority.

9th. An antiquated mule cup and bombilla, said to be found in the Villa Luxan, which had seen service since last century, the bombilla having been used by 17,895 different persons, and the old mate cup of most extraordinary workmanship.

10th. A Silver Plate horse—one of those brutes which can gallop thirty leagues a day for a week without stopping. Whatever may be intended by insertion must be authenticated by the name and address of the writer; not necessarily publication, but as a guarantee of good faith.

THE PALLIDE ALBUM

The second issue for this month is not inferior to any that have gone before, and each successive picture of the Album fills us with fresh admiration of the versatility of subject, correctness of idea, life-like expression, and poetic grouping of the great Franco-Argentine artist.

El Ingenador represents a gauche gallant, singing 'decimas' to a peasant girl, who is seated beside him on the rude bench under the corridor of her rancho. The pose of the figures is capital: with the left leg across his right knee he rests the guitar in artistic fashion, and pours forth the rude song of the Pampas, to the silent admiration of his 'novia,' who has dropped her spinning ball, and yielded her undivided attention to the rhythmical romance. Her father so seated on the ground, or perhaps on a camp-chair (we cannot decide), with his dog inside him, both apparently as intent on the song as to flutter the rural troubadour. Perchance the old man is thinking of his own courting days, when he offered a like incense at the shrine of his affections. The open doorway of the rancho suggests the hospitality characteristic of the honest gaucho but the shadow on the threshold not only indicates the hour of evening, but is perhaps emblematic of the increasing poverty of these poor people so often dragged away from peaceful pursuits to follow a barefooted General, or serve on the Line. Perhaps, if anyone thing were wanting to finish the idea of this nonsade life, we have the bridle lying on the ground, and the 'recado,' or native saddle, placed against the adobe the eaves of the rancho, apparently in only furniture of value. The visit taken in a stretch of level camp, on which are seen some horned cattle; and we are happy to see, they do not suffer from drought, there being a fine 'lisalon' close by.

The Prisoner's Wife represents a young woman sitting on the ground under a heavily-barred window, inside which is a prisoner. The well-defended satisfaction on the trait of conjugal affection which forms the subject of our picture. The prisoner, who has hardly touching the window, as if unwilling to enter the abode of crime. Yet who knows but the poor prisoner is incarcerated for some such offence as eluding military service? An institution 'more honored in the breach than in the observance.' We could well forgive the refusing to leave a home that boasts so handsome and affectionate a wife. In the basket beside her she has brought him his 'yerba' meal, and the 'matecup' shows they have just partaken of the national beverage. She is smoking a cigar, and fixed in thought as the smoke curls out of her archrd mouth. The picture is very pleasing, and if the poor fellow, like Ulysses, expects some one preferring Hymen to Mars, get out of it soon, that patient, lone woman will be comforted, and Mr. Pallicre will have made happy one family more, while he amused and instructs the public. We never knew the want of a work like this till we undertook it. We look to the happy to have procured him two more English subscribers last week, and we hope the success of the 'Album' will renounce the fame and energy of our talented friend. Go ahead, M. Pallicre!

EDITOR'S TABLE.

There was a little more stir in town yesterday. The steamer came up from the Model, the Pavon arrived from Rosario, and the Fides from New York. The foot on Friday night dried the mud, the merchants' clerks were busy running round town collecting—in fact, the dull no-news atmosphere which was noticeable on Friday was dispelled in toto yesterday.

Our colleague the 'Tribuna' seems to think that we are not sufficiently polite when speaking about him, but thanks us for taking up the part of the poor clerks of the Bank. We think it most unfair that the other public employees should receive an increase of salary, and the Bank clerks, who are really hard worked, be left out. This is not fair play, and the 'Tribuna' is perfectly right in calling attention to the matter.

The Pifiero dispute threatens to grow to the most alarming dimensions. The letter in Friday evening's Nacional is a remarkably temperate communication, and admits of very little reply. It would seem that every officer in the Argentine army takes the Pifiero charges as personal insults, still, nothing can justify the writing of such a letter as that published in the Pueblo.

The Provincial Government has ordered Mr. Hunt to be paid the $30,000 for finishing the Canuelas Church. The money is to be paid in monthly instalments of $10,00. Our new Minister, Sor Cardenas seems determined to employ the public moneys well. He has set about naming committees for public schools in all the towns where they are wanted. This speaks well for the character of Sor Cardenas, and from what we hear from all parties, he is a man every way qualified for the high office which he fills. We hope he will turn his attention to the effete administration of justice in the camps, and introduce some law whereby criminals shall be tried and punished within ten days after arrest. This would be a great benefit, and would repress crime.

The Felix Colon, we hear, is sold, up in Uruguay. She was a rather unsuccessful little boat. At the request of the merchants and estancieros the owners of the Era have changed her day for sailing. She will now leave Buenos Ayres every Monday at one o'clock on and after the first of August.

The lambing in some of the northern districts, we learn, has been very poor. A farmer from the Fortin states that some of the flocks had not one hundred lambs in them.

We notice that Sor Riestra is at last Governor of Buenos Ayres. We congratulate the distinguished Argentine upon his success, and hope he will speedily have not heard if Sor Saavedra has irrevocably resigned, or is only temporarily absent in the camp. But the Provincial Government decrees have for the last few days been signed by Riestra. Sor. Saavedra, after all, was a good Governor, but Sor Riestra is a much better man. We hope Sor Saavedra may be detained out of town for a couple of years on business of the greatest importance.

An Irish estancicro has called our attention to the necessity of introducing into this country the same regulation in respecting the marking of sheep, that at present in force in Australia: namely, that every sheep and lamb in the flock must be branded with the mark of the estancia. We think this would be a very salutary regulation, and would put a stop to the systematic sheep stealing at present going on in the camp. By branding the sheep, the owner of lost sheep can discover with greater facility where his sheep may have strayed to. If the Irish were only accustomed to the law, they would find it less expensive and troublesome than when they at present suppose.

The estancia Fairy, we hear, is about to be taken off the Parana, and put on the Uruguay. The Paxon is too well established on the Parana, good though she be, to compete with her. On the Uruguay she will, no doubt, do a great traffic.

A SHARP PRACTITIONER

Since the days of Boutinet and Steenbuck, no one has been so signally successful in what is technically termed "sharp practice" as Dr. Hermansader who left this country by last French packet.

He arrived in Buenos Ayres from the U. States, about 9 months ago, and represented himself as a native of that unfortunate country Sleswig Holstein, from which being expelled in 1848, for political motives, he took refuge in the Great Republic. He was an ardent admirer of President Lincoln, and prayed for the demolition of Charleston with a zeal worthy of General Butler. Foreseeing the possible occurrence of some difficulties to be met with previous in the city, although he had a diploma of a foreign college of surgeons, he went to the camp, and settled down on an American estancia at Fortin de Areco. He published a card in our paper (luckily paid in advance) to the effect that he practised as surgeon and accoucheur. Nevertheless it was seriously doubted that he knew anything at all of medicine, and people fancied he must have borrowed a friend's diploma. How long his professional career might have so continued we know not, but that Dr. Hermansader began to feel "ennui," and proposed taking a "paseo" to town for the glorious celebration of American Independence. The Doctor was well known to all the shopkeepers of the Fortin, who admired alike his profound acquirements and patriotic sentiments. He had almost forgotten to mention his strong Lutheran convictions, which prompted him to get up a collection for the American mission, although by some mistake the money has gone astray.

When the Doctor was leaving the Fortin he remembered that advice of Horace, 'Rixun tereatis amicil' (take a rise out of a friend), and so he took a rise out of Mr. Styles. The creditors in the village were not hucksters to dun a man, and so they mentioned nothing of the little obligations which held him to the scene of his labors.

Nay, a certain trader, named Gonzalez, formerly our agent, who wished to save the expenses of a 'Volante' for carriage of money, begged of him to convey 29,000 dols. mjc, to a merchant in town. In the end, we are to say that in the doctor's haste to see again an infirm relative in Sleswig, he omitted to call on commission. Before taking his passage, however, he made a few purchases. Sr. Vidale (one of Steenbock's friends), supplied him with clothes and boots to the value of 1300 dols.: it is strange that he should have left Sr. Vidale under a bad impression, as the latter has not been paid, and almost despairs of the Doctor's return. Mr. Roover was employed to take his likeness, in a gold locket, which he probably intended for a souvenir to compensate the regret of some friend left behind. The artist declares that he has been done, but that it is ungenerous. A fat storekeeper in Calle Victoria has also some complaint about 20 0 dols. worth of goods, which he inadvertently sold the doctor, when the latter left for the camp to change, but took the articles, promising to pay next day. It is ascertained that the Sleswig-Holstein was entrusted with three watches, one a handsome gold repeater, belonging to confiding friends at the Fortin: we are happy to say he intends getting them repaired at Bordeaux.

Nothing can be more painful than the charge of ingratitude alleged against him by Sr. Bustos, the maker of machines, who paid his hotel expenses on two occasions, and states that he borrowed a double revolver, passport, and Masonic ticket. We can only explain the occurrence, that as the Doctor was about to visit the seat of the Prussian War, he thought he might need it. It may be considered rude that he did not send round visiting cards, P. P. C., previous to departure, he evidently feared his friends would dissuade him from his intended trip. He stated that relays of horses had been sent for him to attend a case of labor in the camp, and meantime took his ticket per Saintonge, on the 4th inst., as Doctor Bell. He is at present crossing the Atlantic, and we trust he will be speedily detected, thought now and then to the manly kind and remembering friends he has left in Buenos Ayres.

COLON THEATRE.

The production on Thursday evening last of Signor Petrella's grand opera "Ione" was an event in the musical world, and drew to the Colon theatre a large and critical audience. The opera though new to Buenos Ayres, is not a novelty in Europe, having had a run of several months almost to a certain age. The composer himself is no longer youthful being some ten or fifteen years the senior of his more celebrated rival Signor Verdi. Signor Petrella was for many years musical director at the Scala, Milan, without but gaining there much distinction as a composer. His name should be familiar to a Buenos Ayres public, as the author of the "Elena" waltz, a piece of music which he subsequently acquired some reputation in Italy. But we believe his most successful work is an opera buffa "le Precauzione."

It was in the year '67 or '68 we do not remember which, that Signor Petrella composed his opera "Ione," and ran an opera for Venice. And at the same time and for the same theatre commissioned a work from Signor Apolloni, the author of "il Ebreo," and a composer of note in Italy. Verdi's opera the "Simon Boccanegra," proved a great success. The opera of Apolloni was that Appoloni presented, met with the same ill fate. But Signor Petrella's opera was more successful, and the opera was "Iona." The Buenos Ayres critics seem to have ratified the decision of the Venetian public, for if we are to judge by outward demonstrations and from the facts that the performers were vociferously called for at the conclusion of the opera, the representation of "Iona" at the Colon was an unpretentiously triumph. It would indeed be difficult to find an opera in which the parts are so well suited to the several artists of the Colon troupe individually as they are in "Iona," Sor. Lolini had an arduous role and towards the conclusion evinced some evidence of fatigue. But he exerted himself manfully and acquited himself to the great satisfaction of the audience. Sor. Celestino did all that was possible to interest us in the amours of a high priest—at all times an ungrateful subject. Signori and Signore Bolis and Bolis 'up' by some learned critics fresh from the reperusal of Bulwer's romance. For ourselves we must plead ignorance as to what was a walking dress of a priest of Isis, A.D. 79, and what peculiar kind of robe de chambre he might don when he received ladies in his sanctum.

Madame Mollo, in the important part of Nidia, once more reminded us if the Italian opera company being able to count upon the assistance of two prima donnas in the company. And as for Madame Bolis, never since we had the pleasure of being present at her debut in the 'Rigoletto' have we seen her act or heard her sing sing so superbly. There were times when we forgot the music in her acting, and this is the highest compliment we can pay to both. For the singing must be dull indeed less when it is so made to blend with the sister art.

Whilst in this laudatory humor, we must not forget to praise the scene-painter and property-man, and above all, the impresario for his spirited liberality in putting the general appointments of the opera. With here and there a slight incongruity, or a trifling departure from historionic truth, the scenery and dresses were most creditable to the management, and they came in for a large share of the applause. Absolute dramatic propriety we do not expect on the Italian stage, where hitherto everything has been sacrificed to the music. But the Italian opera boat, by which the Italians who have largely borrowed their music, are in return rapidly enlightening them in regard to those little accessories! Thus, in the libretto of Ione, we are carefully reminded that recent discoveries in Pompeii have proved the ancients to have been more advanced in glass manufacture than they had credit for. And this little nudge to our mercories was useful to us on Thursday evening when the curtain rose on the enormous display of plate-glass in the windows of Iona's suburban villa. The scene was, however, with the rest, somewhat tame and cumbrous of its kind. A few amendments might be easily made in future representations, with little more trouble to the property man. For instance, the guests at the banquet, if they were not to assume the usually received classic posture, they should sit a little less bolt upright than. The statue of Isis, too, as she is decidedly plain, might be made a less prominent feature, and her glistening eyes would be more unexpected, if the machinery of the lids were less tried. And above all, the last scene might be shorter, or not so capitally illuminated. What Mrs. Partington calls the "corruption of Mount Vesiivrous" might take place less suddenly, occur a little earlier, or be lighted with the use of less sic. Otherwise, with our ears at rest, our whole powers of criticism were directed to the stage and the well organized and prostrate inhabitants; thus, the tragedy is apt to conclude amid—as it do newspapers have it—the general hilarity of the audience.

Of the music, we have not left ourselves much space to speak. It is, however, what we should expect of a writer of the sufficient genius to employ with effect his theoretical knowledge and long experience as the director of an opera house. Signor Petrella is not a born musician. The music of 'Iona,' lower, has the admirable quality of continuity, keeping pace with the action without dragging in a monotone. On one or two occasions it has risen into the sphere of genuine inspiration. Particularly in the new and graceful melody in the first cavatine of Iona's song to admiration by Madame Briol—and in the concerted music forming the finale to the third Act. The Liter is after the manner of the trumpet trio in Verdi; and if far inferior in general power to the music of the author of "Trovatore," is in some respects more pleasing to the ordinary hearer, as the melody is less angular and spasmodic.

MONTEVIDEO

The 'Reforma' of the 21st inst. relates a horrible case of cruelty, on the part of an English tailor, named Mayney, living in Calle Zavala. This man, or rather monster, was brought to justice about a year and a half ago, for having barbarously ill-treated his sister during a long time before. Last week an embargo was placed on his house, probably for debt, and the officers of the law found the unfortunate sister locked up in an inner room, a victim to the most squalid misery and deplorable exhaustion. The police assure seized Maynicy a second time on this disbolical charge, and lodged him in jail. We are glad to hear no fate of the spectacle which the unhappy woman presented. Stretched on a damp floor, with no other covering than an old blanket, it was difficult to recognise in her a human being. Cold and hunger caused her to shiver in a painful manner: she could not be got to utter a single word, her hair seemed a mass of white stuff, and she was perfectly naked. It is a matter of wonder how she has been able to drag out such an exi-tence for a length of time. She was conveyed to hospital in a litter.

The Ministers of France, Italy, Portugal, and Spain, have all written lengthy replies to the Government, deploring the failure of negotiations with Flores and praying President Aguirre to use his efforts for peace. Mr. Lett' some (our Charge d'Affaires) simply acknowledges the receipt of official communications, and assures Minister Herrera of his esteem. The Kings of Sweden and Denmrk Queen Victoria and the Pope have congratulated President Aguirre on his election.

A grand concert will be given at Solis Theatre on the 28th, for the joint benefit of the poor, and Church of San Francisco.

The President and Minister arrived at Canelones, en route for Monevideo, on Saturday last, and stayed there till noon on the 21st. It is rumoured in Buenos Ayres that they had a very narrow escape, Flores's advanced picquets having intercepted Moreno's army. Some assert that they were going to see Flores, but this is not likely. Others say that immediate purpose was to relieve the sick General but the 'Reforma' alleges, with seeming truth, that it was to inspect the army and see to its payment.

On the 19th Moreno was encamped at Chamizo, and a spy of Flores, returned from the camp, stated that Lord Sta. Lucia at Paso Roldan same day: he adds that Flores' men are deserting daily.

We have no news how the sale on the 22nd went off, of jerked beef, damaged in the week of the Doctor Cruzeut. The Italian boat, by which it reports a foreign barque, flag unknown, aground to the East of Castillos.

The papers give no further news respecting the Brazilian invasion, as if ignorant of so important a matter.

OLIDEN BEEF.

Mr. Olideu requests us to state in answer to Mr. Claypole, that the hat which he refers to exposed at the Clerk of Smith Brothers informed him, but that the words "of the same house" referred to the firm which had first given him particulars on the subject.

We are glad to say that Sor. O. despatched nearly 200 quintals of Olideu beef per Uruguay and Paysandu, and has engaged freight by next steamer of same line for 400 quintals more.

IRELAND.

The ceaseless flow of emigration from this country is scarcely more important than the direction of the current. The mass of the emigrants are bound not to the British colonies, but to the United States. Up to then the City of Glasgow arrived off Queenstown on the 4th ult 939 passengers were put on board, making her entire number about 700, while no less than 900 persons were left behind, who had procured passage tickets. The Cork Reporter states the result for passengers for the week or gbat persons desirous of being booked on Thursday would not be entered for any time before the 20th of June next, with a probability of their having to wait still longer. There are over 2000 persons already enter'd to sail in the Inman Company's boats, and before one of that number can be reached there will be a vast increase by other entries made in Liverpool and Queenstown, and by the agents in the interior and all over the United States. We have been informed by some of the emigrants that the 'Reporter's' account of the ill-treatment of Irish emigrants by Captain Cook, of the Inman steamer City of Limerick, is false in every particular. The Limerick left Queenstown on the 2nd inst. with 1,000 passengers, and arrived at New York on the 14th inst. Mr. Cook is a native of Cork, and is highly esteemed by all the passengers who sailed with him. The Limerick is a splendid vessel, and her accommodations for passengers are unsurpassed. The Limerick will sail from Queenstown on the 16th inst. for New York.

NEW YORK WOOL MARKET

Pending the revision of the tariff, and in view of possible contingencies growing out of the great military events of the day, the movement in both domestic and foreign has been extremely restricted—both buyers and sellers awaiting further developments, which will afford a more reliable basis for commercial calculations. Generally, with light stocks, holders are firm at prices which are generally above the views of purchasers. Some of the most needy manufacturers have been in market since our last, and we learn of sales of 700 lbs. Domestic fleece at 78 to 83 cents.; 14,000 lb. Buenos Ayres; 5000 lb. scoured Cape, @120; 150 bales Crimean, 40; 40 do. Rosario, about 24, and 60 to 70 do. Buenos Ayres, on private terms. By auction, 9 bales merino, 30; 199 do. unwashed African, averaging 23 3-9; and 43 do. Cape, averaging 33—all slightly damaged. An auction sale of 1400 bales Mediterranean is advertised for the 18th inst.

MEDICAL REVIEW

The number for this fortnight is not very interesting, though very scientific. The editors seem to ratify the condemnation of Dr. Pommerals by the French tribunals for poisoning his mistress. There are two papers on Tracheotomy, which may be read in a railway carriage by anyone travelling with his wife, Dr. Quiñones kicks up a row about an individual named Spucho who asks permission to start a apothcary's shop at Villa Luxan: it is rightly feared that before long several of the inhabitants would show premature signs of asphyxiation at Dr. Quiñones gives us to understand Mr. Spucho might possibly mistake Glauber Salts for Prussic Acid and vice-versa.

URUGUAY.

Murder of Three Persons.

By some mistake, our papers from Concepcion reach only to the 16th inst. A negro was murdered at Gen. Quiraza's saladero of Sta. Candida: the assassin is in prison. A dentist named Orfila had just arrived from Europe and offers his services. On the 20th ult. a law was passed, ordering the construction of side-paths in all the streets, at the expense of the several house owners. The Entre Rian Bank has established an agency at Concordia. The heirs of the late Mr. Charles Watter (Swiss) are invited to claim his property.

Three fellows, named Rosario Tello, Bernardino Suarez, and Isidro Alarcon, are requested to deliver themselves up to justice for the murder of Lorenzo Retamal, his wife Domingo, and a girl named Vicenta Godoy, in the district of Nogoyá.

THE ROSARIO MAILS.

We received no 'Ferro-carril' per Pavon, and are indebted to the courtesy of the 'Tribuna' for the following items :—

Pacification of Salto.—Dates from Salto are to the 26th June. A subscription amounting to $916 has been collected for the widows and orphans of the victims of the May revolution. The elections were to come off on the 3rd inst.

Neto Governor of Rioja.—We have no further news of the recent revolt at Patquia, which seems all over. The rebel army (58 strong) had retired to San Juan. The peaceable citizens anxiously awaited the arrival of the new Governor from B. Ayres, Colonel Julio Campos.

Mutiny at San Juan.—Major Rickard's former battalion 'Rifleros' mutinied when ordered to march for San Luis. They killed Captain Gomez, and seized the other officers, whose fate is unknown; then marched into San Juan at dead of night, stormed the barrack of San Clemente, supplied themselves with ammunition, &c., and marched out to Chacarilla; their Colonel (Giuffra) was in the city and escaped: the citizens were terribly alarmed, and it is not yet known what excesses have been committed.

Cordoba and Mendoza—Dates are to July 15th. The festivals of the 9th were very dull. The province is going on well. The snows of the Cordillera are represented as unusually severe: all communication with Chile cut off. All going well in the provinces of Tucuman, Jujuy, and San Luis. Sor. Gordillo and the engineers for the Salina Wells in Rioja set out for that province with machinery, &c.

THE URUGUAY

This Liverpool steamer, which leaves on Tuesday, made so rapid a passage out, that there are bets she will beat the Royal Mail: we, therefore, send some papers.

A MUSTARD POULTICE AND ITS CONSEQUENCES.—The following story which we do not remember to have seen in print, is now circulating on 'Change. It may be old, but is received as new and true. At a famous watering place, within the memory of many gentlemen was severely afflicted with a pain in the stomach, which neither gin cocktails nor other cordials could remove. It was night and he was in bed. His loving wife, unwilling to wake the domestics, descended to the kitchen and prepared a mustard poultice, which she spread on her own handkerchief, and proceeded with it to her undressed lord. Before leaving him, she left a light dimly burning in his apartment: but deeply impressed with anxiety, she was not as careful as she might have been in noting the number of her room.

Guided by a light which she saw shining in a chamber, and which she supposed was the one she had left, she entered and gently raising the bedclothes, &c., laid the warm poultice upon a stomach, but not the stomach of her lord.

"Hello there! What the —— are you about?" Shouted a voice of thunder, and the body and sleeves whence it issued, sprang out of bed.

The lady screamed and ran; her husband rushed to the rescue from the next room, the waiters joined, and a small scene ensued, much to the amusement of all concerned. The poulticed gentleman had indiscreetly left a light in his room, and this lured the lady from her pallet.

Her husband was so amused and excited by the mistake that he quite forgot his pains, but with his wife and trunks, left for parts unknown. The poulticed man still retains the handkerchief—a beautiful cambric—with the lady's name upon it, which he considers of rare value.—[Traveller.

LOCAL EVENTS

Disgraceful Tricks—Don Daniel Lopez published yesterday morning a letter, rescinding the invitation to go his funeral, which appeared in Friday's 'Nacional.' Not long ago a gentleman in Calle Peru was surprised at his breakfast table by some 20 friends all dressed in black, who had come to bury him, under a similar error. The author of this ought to whip the authors of such pranks publicly through the streets. The 'Nacional' complains of a pasquil stuck against Sr. Bermudez, bearing a foot the name of no printing-office. There are so few 'impostas' in the city, that this would be easily discovered. If a reward of 5,000 dols. were offered by Government, the offender would soon be discovered, and the office ought to be closed.

Congress—The Senate met yesterday. The committee threw out the bill for prosecution of the 'Pueblo' articles against Señor Firmo. Doubtless Don Rojo's petition for two months' leave of absence, in order to pacify Salta, the Minister of War declared that a courtmartial was to be held on those officers who had sided with the Urturus.

Sudden Death—The 'Pueblo' reporter took a clerk in a shop, 437 Victoria, dropped dead yesterday: corpse was conveyed to the Policia.

Governor Saavedra—The Governor (says the 'Pueblo') is about to make a tour of the interior. He leaves To-day.

Man Drowned—A sailor fell overboard from the 'Corrientes, when leaving Montevideo: his corpse could not be recovered.

General Acosta, of Flores' staff, arrived in town on Friday night, on special mission to Government.

Minister Negrete has been received by the Argentine Government.

The brokers were very busy to day, and there was a great stir of business noticeable in the hall; it was said that some bulls who had been buying bid week at 29 30 for to-day, and had not previous'y bought in were heavy losers this afternoon. About twelve o'clock there was a great effort made to 'shove up specie, but it was not reciprocated, and several who bought in the early part of the day at 28 95 sold out at 29 00 two o'clock, at 28 85, so great is the nervous feeling on 'Change respecting the future price of the paper money.

The new project by the National Finance Minister was greatly discussed, and it is said that it will be introduced into the Senate on Tuesday next, and run through with all speed.

The collections through town to day we hear were scanty, neither could our paper to be got from the shop keepers. A few bills on England were passed to-day at previous rates.

There is a very anxious feeling amongst both brokers and merchants as to the possible consequences likely to ensue from the sudden change in the value of our circulating medium, as it is feared that it will bring on a crisis. The purchases for the end of the year are extremely large, and it is to be seen the general opinion that if the project passes, no broker on the Bol-a is safe, for of course after the opinion on the matter, but merely state what is the general rumour. At every hazard however it is desirable that we can should be put to speculation in the currency, and we opine that neither will the losser be so stupendous, no longer so ruinous, if a fair value is put on the dollar, as is generally supposed.

There were no charters effected in town to-day, but we hear of one from Montevideo—the Bremen barque Columbia, to reload guano, or American ship Union, at Ste. Antwerp.

Several buyers of Provincial and National Bonds have made their appearance on 'Change, and offer, we understand, 2 and even 3 per cent. over last quotations, but the holders are very wary, and refuse to sell under 75 per cent.

Mr. Wheelwright, we believe, is expected in town to-morrow, from Rosario. He returns in order to write by the Rosario mail.

The Pavon arrived punctual to a minute, but brought neither silver from San Juan nor news from Chile. Rumour, however, is coming down from Cordoba, although we hear from dealers that the return of coppers is at present a losing business.

The Paraguay steamer will be due to-morrow.

The Fairy is due to-day from Rosario and leaves this evening for Montevideo

The 'Nacional' erroneously states that Mr. Wheelwright leaves to-morrow, for Rosario.
